ADVISORY BOARD

Adam B. Coleman is the author of “The Children We Left Behind” and “Black Victim To Black Victor”, a New York Post contributor, public speaker, and the founder of Wrong Speak Publishing.

He was born in Detroit but raised in a variety of states throughout America. He writes openly about his personal struggles with fatherlessness, homelessness and masculinity. He is always questioning the world around him, even if they are uncomfortable questions to ask.

Adam strongly believes that we should all have the ability to speak freely and is now advocating for people who feel voiceless to be heard.

Strong Fathers. Strong Families. Defending Freedom.
